Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Friday 12 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Snow showers in east, elsewhere dry and sunny. Cold.

Today:
Another cold day with occasional sleet and snow showers affecting the east, especially the northeast, and the Northern Isles. Elsewhere a largely dry day with long sunny spells. Freshening southeasterly winds, with coastal gales developing in west.

Tonight:
Snow showers in northeast becoming fewer and further between, otherwise a dry night with long clear spells, although the southwest becoming cloudier later. Widespread sub-zero temperatures despite the southeasterly breeze.

Saturday:
Any snow showers becoming confined to Shetland. Otherwise a bright day with sunny spells, although cloud increasing from the southwest with patchy light snow edging east into central parts. Windy.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Outbreaks of snow, perhaps freezing rain, edging east and slowly turning to rain, Sunday. Monday and Tuesday look less cold with occasional rain. Strong southerly winds with coastal gales easing.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.